AIRLINE INTERVIEW COACHING SESSION

Learn to Fly has teamed up with Captain Darren McPherson to offer a one day Airline Interview Skills Training program. With 30 years of flying experience and currently operating as a Senior Captain at one of Asia's most prominent airlines, Darren will be presenting this course to help those who are preparing for the application and interview phases of the airline recruitment process.

This course will establish a foundation for interview standards that can be utilised over time for applications at various airline operators. The small group environment will allow for active participation with lecturers and create an effective learning environment which will help elevate your interview skills to a level above the competition.

AIRLINE INTERVIEW COACHING SESSION

Growing Demand for Pilots

In the current airline market, both within Australia and the Asia Pacific region, the demand for pilots in the coming years has been determined to far exceed the numbers previously expected. This has created an opportunity for aspiring candidates to take that next step in proactive training, which will supplement operational flying exposure and qualifications.

Course Content

The workshop will take place over one day in an open yet coordinated format. It will progress from the application phase, discussing various methods used in the selection process of the panel interview; through to the simulator and technical assessment. Group exercises and the skills required to optimise these events will also be examined.

Throughout these sessions, typical questions and scenarios will be reviewed leading to mock interviews with the group to demonstrate effective use of interview techniques.

During the day our lecturers will be available to answer any questions that may arise, not just from the workshop but personal areas that you may have relating to your own airline application or potential interview.

Further Study

If further support is desired beyond this day course, we will inform you of the various available options. This may take the form of personal one-on-one interview skills training sessions or individual mock interviews. These options can be used as a measure of your current level of interview performance and incorporate assessment measures to consider prior to your actual airline interview date.

YOUR SYLLABUS WILL COVER

- ✓ Airline Industry & Market Overview
A detailed overview of the current airline industry and market forecasts for the coming years in the various regions within Australasia will be given. Also a specific review of the market outlook for individual airlines within this region including Cathay Pacific Airways & DragonAir (Cathay Dragon) of Hong Kong, and The QANTAS Group and various key General Aviation (GA) operators within Australia.
- ✓ The Airline Interview Process
The airline interview process can be a daunting unknown for many candidates. We will consider the various stages throughout this process and discuss all aspects of airline pilot screening. The various methods of IQ and psychometric testing through to the panel interview, group exercises and flight simulator assessments.
- ✓ Human Resources (HR) Questioning
HR questioning and methods will be discussed and techniques will be practiced that can be utilised during an interview. After identifying question types these methods will be practiced with comparable question scenarios in a mock interview environment, this will help develop successful answering skills.
- ✓ Group Exercises and Skills
Group skills have become a significant factor in the airline pilot recruitment phase. Techniques will be reviewed that demonstrate the effects of various personality types. These will be further examined with real life scenarios, resulting in a method to ensure a safe and effectual outcome.
- ✓ Technical Assessments
Technical assessment is critical for any airline interview candidate. Our technical assessment session will indicate the effective levels required for the various points candidates could enter an airline; from cadets with zero experience to pilots with a number of years flying experience. This will help identify where you can begin and to what depths any pilot should prepare prior to their panel interview.
- ✓ Open Discussion and Questions
Throughout the day various times will be available for both individual and group discussion to consider the wide ranging aspects of the recruitment and interview process. These discussions are expected to provide accurate and real life feedback to candidates that may not be available from reading guides or online forums. As this LIVE feature of the workshop is available it is expected to be actively utilised throughout the course.
- ✓ Interactive Grading Session
Prior to any interview all candidates are curious as to their current interview standard. Upon completion of this interactive interview exercise, candidates will have a graded indication of their existing standard. This grading can be utilised with information from further sessions, and once applied will improve their overall position towards a successful airline interview.
